❖ Characteristics of an effective feedback:

2. It should focus on the performance and not on the individual.
3. It should be clear, specific, and based on direct observation.
4. It has to be delivered using neutral, non-judgmental language.

❖ Types of feedback

   - Gathered through casual conversations, discussions, or observations. It is spontaneous, unscheduled, and mainly tied to specific actions.
2. Formal feedback
   - Collected through structured methods like surveys, evaluations, and assessments. It is scheduled and planned.
3. Student peer feedback
   - Peers at the same level provide distinct perspectives to help each other's progress and development.

4. Student self-feedback
   - Reflecting on how one has performed and determining areas for improvement encourages personal development and responsibility.
5. Constructive feedback
   - This type is specific, focusing on issues and providing recommendations for improvement while highlighting the positives in performance or behavior.

❖ Feedback models

I. Feedback Sandwich

2. States areas of agreement and elaborates on good performance.
3. Ask what was poor or could have been improved.
4. States what could have been improved.
